Janna Hami, MD

"I am an adamant advocate for my patients and go above and beyond for their well-being."

Janna Hami, MD was inspired to become a physician at a young age. Her mother had a career in health care, and she helped care for her ailing father who succumbed to a terminal brain disease when Dr. Hami was only 18 years old.

Dr. Hami maintains a diverse, active lifestyle. Born and raised in Alberta, Canada, she enjoys the outdoors, and traveling, hiking, and swimming in the beautiful State of Arizona. She has also traveled to Africa and Haiti as a volunteer physician to aid in humanitarian efforts. In addition, Dr. Hami is also an award-winning dancer and fitness instructor.

Always feeling that family medicine was her true calling, Dr. Hami enjoys practicing continuity of care and getting to intimately know her patients and their families. She values the art of medicine and understands that treatment plans are not "one size fits all."

During her medical training, Dr. Hami worked with the Andrew Weil Center for Integrative Medicine in Tucson. This experience nurtured her passion for integrative medicine and desire to develop an individualized, achievable health plan for each of her patients. Dr. Hami integrates diet, exercise, and other modalities into treatment plans in addition to traditional clinical options such as medications, medical specialists, and procedures.

Prior to joining Banner Health, Dr. Hami provided health care to the homeless as the medical director for Phoenix-based, Circle the City; she led development of mobile, inpatient and outpatient clinics for patients of all ages. Dr. Hami has also supported the next generation of family medicine practitioners and was an assistant professor at Mesa-based A.T. Still University, as well as being a preceptor for medical students from Midwestern University and the University of Arizona.

Married since 2017 to husband, Fahad, a business analyst and information technology professor at Grand Canyon University, Dr. Hami looks forward to building relationships with her Banner Beyond patients and helping them achieve their health and wellness goals.

Loren S. Lasater, MD, FAAFP

"My goal is to develop healing relationships with my patients through listening, showing dignity and respect, and learning what matters most to each individual."

Growing up watching the television series, "Marcus Welby, MD," a young Loren Lasater was inspired by the caring, compassionate family doctor and decided to become a family medicine physician. Through his clinical knowledge and Dr. Welby-inspired care and compassion, Loren Lasater, MD prioritizes and individualizes each patient's care.

Dr. Lasater was born and raised in Houston, Texas and completed medical school in his home state. A proud, loyal Texan, he remains an associate professor of family medicine at Texas Christian University and University of North Texas Health Science Center School of Medicine in Fort Worth.

Dr. Lasater has been active in the United States Army Reserve for more than eighteen years and is a Colonel in the Medical Corps. He maintains his health and conditioning for his periodical Army Reserve fitness test by running Phoenix's desert trails and skiing in Telluride, Colorado. He also enjoys reading history and science fiction books.

In the Lasater household, health care is a family passion. His wife, Nancy, has a master's degree in health administration, is a registered dietitian, and teaches at Paradise Valley Community College. They have three children and two rescue Labrador Retrievers.

Before moving to Arizona, Dr. Lasater was a physician leader and practicing physician in Texas and was actively involved in academic medicine. Most recently he was the chief medical director for Family Medicine Ambulatory Care, supporting the family medicine residency program at John Peter Smith Physician Group in Fort Worth. He was also a multi-regional director for the Texas Academy of Family Physicians. He has continued his academic career as a Clinical Associate Professor of Family Medicine and Community Medicine at the University of Arizona.

First introduced to the Valley of the Sun during his family medicine residency, Dr. Lasater is excited to return to Phoenix and support the health of our growing community.

Getting Support from Your Banner Beyond Primary Care Physician and Care Team

What if I have a lot of questions during my appointment with my Banner Beyond physician?

Banner Beyond was designed to provide a more relaxed, customized health experience by limiting the number of members in the program. You will have all the time you need to ask questions and discuss available treatment options- not just medications- for any medical condition you may have. Your Banner Beyond physician will have that extra time to spend with you and be available via call or text for questions that may surface after or in-between appointments.

What happens if I need to see a specialist?

After an evaluation by your Banner Beyond physician, a referral to a medical specialist may be needed. In such situations, your Banner Beyond physician will work with you to find the best specialist to meet your unique needs. Your clinical needs, urgency of the medical issue, and personal preferences (proximity to home, physician gender, etc.) will be discussed to find the right specialist to address your illness or condition. Your Banner Beyond physician may contact the specialist to discuss your medical needs and goals. Finally, your Banner Beyond care team will coordinate your referral and appointment by contacting the specialist and ensuring you have all the information you need to have an exceptional visit.

May I continue to use my current primary care provider?

As a member of Banner Beyond, your primary care will be supported exclusively by our primary care physicians to ensure continuity of care, 24/7 communication to your physician, and optimization of your Banner Beyond benefits. When you become a member, we will work with you and your current primary care provider to have your medical records transferred to the Banner Beyond physician you choose, so you can be assured your medical history is integrated into your future treatment plans.
